SAFETY FACTS:

Preventing Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

During winter months, carbon monoxide poisoning is a potential danger in any home that uses fuel for heating. Carbon monoxide is an odorless & colorless gas that is the product of combustion fumes. In today's well insulated homes, it can build up to a toxic level if fuel burning furnaces & appliances aren't properly maintained.

The most common signs of poisoning include:

- Headaches
- Dizziness & Nausea
- Weakness & Confusion
- Chest Pain

Here are a few precautions:

- Have your heating & air conditioning system checked.
- Replace fuel burning appliances that work inefficiently.
- Make sure your home has proper ventilation. Consider installing a whole house ventilation system.
